

A Little Perspective

The Goal: Growing your business.

Problem: Overcoming a client's objection to fees. A client generates little revenue, but calls often for tax help, quotes, or a market update. For their benefit, and to be paid for your ongoing service, you suggest they invest in a mutual fund or annuity. They balk, asking: "Why pay fees in a down market, especially if I don't trade a lot?"

Our Suggestion: Take a holistic approach. As a financial advisor, explain that your services cover more than just investments. A family's well-being is your concern, and your guidance is worth paying for.

Result: Your business grows, as clients are happier, and accounts are more productive.

Ideas and Considerations

- 1) Evaluate strategies: Use UGMA, taxable account, 529, or IRA? Should grandparents donate money?
- 2) Review vehicles and asset allocations. Maybe max-out a 401(k) and invest more aggressively.
- 3) Evaluate gifting strategies: e.g., use a 529 or an UGMA? Maybe create trusts and re-title property.
- 4) Use trusts to shelter assets from taxes and a will to transfer others. Use a life insurance trust to pay taxes.
- 5) Discuss pros and cons of a variable rate mortgage, paying points, and paying-down the mortgage early.
- 6) Evaluate family's insurance needs. Do they need a term or whole-life, disability, health, or auto policy?
- 7) Determine gifting schedule, affect on taxes, and whether to use cash or appreciated securities.
- 8) Create cash management account and home equity credit line. Consolidate credit card debt at lower rate.
- 9) Establish 401(k) for company and deferred comp plan for senior staff. Provide business line of credit.
- 10) Review asset allocations: e.g., be more aggressive in 401(k). Review funds & use lower-expense ones.

Perspective: When selling funds, you prefer C-shares. They pay you 1% per year. By contrast, you recently gave a 15% tip to a waiter you never saw before, and may never see again. You paid them fifteen times what you charge for your services! Clearly, your services (detailed above) are worth more than a burger and fries!
